

Abstract of the disclosure:

A system or method whereby the users of a computer network, such as Internet, may enter all information required by the requested site as one single text box where the information provided by the users will be entered according to the title above the text box using a slash or any mean of separation between each category as indicated by the software. Such process will bring an easier, faster and more convenient way to register, sign in, login and/or enter information over a computer network such as Internet, either via a personal computer or a wireless device, by a single click in a single line. This method will also save time of users who participate in a registration or input process, plus this will require less room to be displayed, which will lead also to increase clients and e-commerce over the Internet.